The widow, at the time of receiving the shocking intelligence, which was imparted in tender manner by Captain Hammet, was fuckling her youngest daughter, and had just time and recollection sufficient to give the infant to an attendant ere she funk lifeless on the floor : she has remained ever fince in a firmation too dreadful for description. The distress of Mrs Peirce, for the loss of an affectionate hulband, and two amiable daughters, muit be inconceivably great. But when time has in fome degree moderated her grief, we hope that it may yield her fome confolation to reflect, that the inyield her some consolation to reslect, that the intended voyage of her daughters to India proceeded entirely from the earnest and repeated spicinations of the two unfortunate young ladies to their parents, in order to indulge the request of an affectionate brother, who has for some time resided in Hengal.

Extract of a latter from Christ-Church, Hants,

7an. 12: 2786.

Levry day brings in fresh intelligence of dead bodies being cast on shore on the west beach, from the wreck of the unfortunate Halfewel Indiaman. There were two buried here yesterdiy, and two more are to be buried here this day; and I heard last night four or five dead bodies were lying on the beach. The whole shore, from Christ Church Haad to Pool, is strewed with wreek. For the honour of humanity, I should wish to conceal the freatment which thele dead bodies meet with from the favage thore-walkers; they are generally ftript naked, and left without any discriminating mark, except of dex only. The gentlemen of the neighbourhood have (much to their humanity) done all in their hower to refere these unfortunate sufferers from the rapa-city of these wretches, but it is hardly pullible to prevent it."

HALSEWELL INDIAMAN. The following is an authentic Lift of the Perfor who belonged to the Halfewell Indiaman, and who escaped the dreadful shipswreek.

Extract of a letter from London, Jan. 17. paches brought over by the Swallow packet-boat, the Directors of the East India Company have deter-mined to superfede all their servants in the East Indies, who have testified their disapprobation of Mi Pitt's bill. How this will be carried into execution in a country where the military, as well as the offi-cers in the civil department, have entered into re-folutions to oppose the bill, is not easy to be conceived.

The Court of Session yesterday determined a cause of a very fingular nature. —Some years ago the Re-verend Mr William Shaw, formerly minister of Ardclach, in the county of Nairn, published by subscription, a Dictionary of the Gaelic Language. Previous to the publication, proposals were exhibited to the public, containing an enumeration of various particulars, which it was proposed should be inferred in the Dictionary, and a respectable number of sub-feribers were obtained. After the Dictionary was printed and published, about four-fifths of the subscribers accepted of the book, and paid their subscription money; but several of the subscribers declined paying their fubscriptions, alledging, that as the author had not specifically implemented the terms of his proposals, they were not bound to accept of the book, which they also declared was a very bad per-Grenance, and in no view a proper Dictionary of the Gaelic Language. An action was brought by Mr Shaw against the refractory subscribers before the Court of Session, in which a proof was led as to the merit of the work; and all the witnesses agreed that the author had not fulfilled the terms of his proposals, although one or two of the witnesses at the same time thought, that the Dictionary was at that they had derived confiderable benefit from it. The Court, after hearing very ingenious pleadings by the counsel for both parties on Thursday and yesterday, came to be of opinion, that although the proposals, yet as the defenders could not instruct, that he had wilfully suppressed any of his materials, or been guilty of fraud or deceit in the execution of that therefore the subscribers were liable, and the Court also found the pursuer entitled to his expences. Counsel for Mr Shaw, Mr Solicitor-General, and Mr William Tait; agent Mr Robert Dundas, writer to the fignet. Counsel for the defenders, Mr James Grant, and Mr William Camp-

They returned again to Fullarton-street, where the same was repeated. Bonfires, illuminations, an elegant dinner, and a chearful glafs, concluded the day. At the fame time the tehants and their families were hospitably entertained at Fullarton-house. At both places the day concluded with the greatest mirth and leafure upon that joyful occasion.

ferent tan-works, hides, both tanned and untanned.
Wednesday, Elisabeth Paul and Mary McNicol

They were some time ago indicted before the Circuit Ceurt for flealing from bleachfields, and, upon their petitions, were banished Scotland for life, under the certification of being whipped, and again banished, if found in this kingdom. Mary M'Nicol, immediately after suffering the above difgraceful punishment, was again' committed to prison for carrying off goods from a bleachfield fince her returning from hapifhment.

To the Printer of the Caledonian Mercury. SIR, Aberdeen, January 14, 1786. N an age to very interested as the present, when a fordid attachment to MONEY prevails to fud a degree, as almost totally to extinguish every liberal and generous fentiment, it appears to me high proper, for the fake of instruction and example, that the exertions of a noble exalted MIND, undebuted by this mean passion, should be communicated to the public. Every body in this corner of the country knows, that an Honourable Lord has lately fac for mentioned, it is necessary they though the reformed, that, with a mind more ample, he has, is the most liberal and generous manner, already be-flowed very large sums, in money and annuities, or those he thought deserving; that he is daily employed in planning and doing acts of uncommon be neficence, and that he still intends to do many more Although the great estate he has succeeded to it much lower rented than any lands in this country, yet, by the late bad crops, there are confiderable artears on it. The one half of those arrears, to the extent of many hundred pounds, he has directed his factors to discharge; and has, moreover, given or ders for making out and completing, at a very confiderable expence, a road to a feaport town, which was much wanted, and will be very beneficial to all the neighbourhood. Ya Noblemen and Gentlemen if your feelings of humanity do not prompt you to imitate these last-mentioned instances of gynerosity. at least, consider, that your own interest is insepconnected to promote it, you must give them proper encouragement! Such a conduct, Mr Printer, makes on regret that so worthy a personage should ever be doomed to pay the debt of nature, and that is should not be blessed with perpetual health and it gout, to enjoy the richest of all feasts, THE FRANT OF THE MIND, and to fet a constant example to degenerate mercenary age.
